The FMCG industry is currently going through a phase of massive transformation. Companies now need to break traditions and implement solid new-age strategies in producing, selling and distributing goods. The FMCG industry has also seen a rise in M & A deals and more investors will pump money into this thriving sector. With the rising per capita income of the Indian population and the growth of the rural sector, total consumption expenditure will increase from US$ 1411 billion in 2014 to US$ 3600 billion in 2020.

Supply chain innovations will support the FMCG industry which is characterised by complex distribution network and intense competition. Companies with better supply chain system will perform well, whereas those with poorly managed supply chains will find it tough to even survive in the competitive market. With India becoming the global manufacturing hub, it needs to put its supply chain in order to best utilize the various opportunities in the national and international markets. Introduce world class strategies to meet customers’ growing expectations of quick delivery of quality goods, and moving away from the ‘one size fits all’ approach to a more tailored one.
